Women in Science and Technology: Confronting Inequalities comprehensively explores women’s status in the Science and Technology (S&T) domain by rigorously analysing and interpreting extensive recent information on major areas such as engineering, medicine, physical sciences, biosciences and mathematics. The book forcefully demonstrates that gender-based differences and expectations play the determining role in limiting women's participation in S&T. These exist in various forms, from making subject choices in school and opting for specific disciplines in college to embracing specific career avenues such as scientific research. This book shows how the construction of gendered identities is perpetuated through a masculine culture in the informal environment of elite educational institutes and in major S&T workplaces such as academia and research laboratories, which serve together to exclude women from peer groups and opportunities for advancement. The book makes substantive recommendations for policy measures on college admissions, improvement of institutional and organizational environments, and recruitment and capacity building for women in S&T. It calls for substantially reducing the myriad societal and familial barriers through cooperation and understanding.

Instead of being theoretical, this book describes the real life situations, in which common people actually applied the success principles in their life, and achieved what is considered impossible by many! Going through the pages of 'Real Inspiring Success Stories,' will urge you to recharge yourself, gather confidence, and dare to do what you were hesitant to do earlier. The heroes of these real success stories are common people like you and me, who struggled against all odds— social, financial, physical or emotional, and emerged winners because of their indomitable spirits.

They followed their dreams passionately and turned obstacles into stepping stones in their journey of success. You never know your success story may be featured in one of the subsequent seasons!
